(2012-09-23 14:47) myself:

oh wait it's the middle of the night. I got a request from vice magazing to do an interview, btw. I told them I'd talk to my PR consultant first :) Here's what they've written:

Dear the Dread Pirate Roberts,

I am acting as an intermediary for Hamilton Morris of Vice Magazine. He would like to do an interview with the Dread Pirate Roberts, or the owners of Silk Road. I'm sure he will be amenable to using a secure chat solution, such as OTR, PGP, torchat or CryptoCat.

You can Google Hamilton Morris to see some of his work. He is very smart and respectable and I'm sure he would only have excellent questions.

You can reply to me here on SR, or OTR on jabber ageisp0lis@jabber.org (same SN for AIM), ageis on freenode, or e-mail me at kevin@ageispolis.net using the following GPG public key:
<http://ageispolis.net/kmgpubkey.txt> .

If you are willing to set up such an interview please let me know. I told him I would do him the favor of trying to get him in contact.

Dude, God is putting on a lightning storm the likes of which I've never seen. Can't even hear myself think over the constant thunder. I'm amazed I've still got power.

don't let your computer fry

(2012-09-23 14:50) cimon: I have two spares ;)

(2012-09-23 14:58) cimon: Nobody has ever regretted not doing an interview; lots of folks have regretted doing one.

(2012-09-23 15:00) cimon: A problem I have with any type of interview is it ties you down, or could, in areas you want to remain loose. Are there one or more of you. Are you the guy who started the site, or the third or fourth operator. Problem is areas where we want misdirection are the hardest to do, as pride makes you want to say yeah, I started it, nyah, nyah... but security says you should claim otherwise. It gets tough, and guaranteed at least one or more major mistake will be made during the process.
